FREW, CAMPBELL & HART, Wheeling, W. Va.

[Vntered at the Postoffice at Wheeling, W. Va., as

A Party Without the Officer Because the Republican party has lost executive control of the National Government and, sooner or later, will be left in the enjoyment of very few offices, and these the lesser ones, there are Republicans who are arrited and the state for animals to drink. licans who are quite uneasy about the future. Some of the brethren talk as though a party couldn't live without the public crib to dip into. Some of the officeholders expecting to be beheaded, are in headlong to perdition.

This is only the old disease in a new form. Who has not seen he Republican party go to the bad a dozen times a month because it either could not or would not find a place for some leatherlunged yelper or chronic office-seeker? The Democratic party, too, has passed through the trying ordeal of a spoils-hunter's disappointment. It is an experience common to all parties, but it is a malady which is never fatal to the party.

If the Republican party had lived in these latter days for the offices and on the these latter days for the offices and on the offices, this would be as good a time as any for it to be carried to God's acre. But the Chasselss family, and its seedless the chastel the control of the body and the chastel the control of the control of the chastel of the chastel the control of the chastel o a hundred thousand office holders bear a small relation to five millions of voters. The great mass of Republicans have been glad to fight for the principles on which the party rests. They have not sought or limfollice. Pap was not necessary to keep them in good health. They have pursued their own callings, been in longer flow.

There were received in Chicago during the year 1884 about 19,708 tons of cheese, against 23,978 for the year 1883. The released with good digestion and without the stimulant of office maintained a healthy and robust Republicanism. They will regret to see the good men of their party, who have performed long and faithful public service, turned adrift to seek they exployed the properties of the respiratory of the service. The fleece on the Merine, range should other employment. But they will not see in this the death blow to all their hopes of their party's continued usefulness. They expect to come into the offices again, as incident to power and responsibility, but they do not cling to the hope of public place as the one thing worth living for.

Those who feel the other way about it will sour, and fernent and burst with will sour, and ferment and burst with the splcen of disappointment. The sooner they burst the better. Healthier recruits will take their places.

Mr. Irving in America. The second American campaign of Mr.

Henry Irving, just closed, was remarkable in more respects than one. It was a remarkable artistic triumph. It is plain that he grew upon his critics, who found less to criticise unfavorably than they saw a year ago. They had less to say of his mannerisms, probably because they became more accustomed to them, and perhaps because the critics were so charmed by Mr. Irving's artistic effects that they no longar bothered themselves about the methods employed to produce them. It may also be that a growing public appreciation had something to do with blunt-ing the points of the critical pens; for if "all the world" approves what is the use of the critical few picking flaws?

Mr. Irving became the vogue in society The sock and buskin laid aside, he could hold his own with the college professors the literateurs, the men of polite learning He had read, he had observed, he could talk, and it is even said that he could lis It became fashionable for men and women in the highest circles to pay court to him. The more society saw that his head was not turned by these attractions the more it heaped them upon him. The invitation to deliver a discourse before the Shakespeare Club of Harvard University was a notable compliment which recognized not only the great actor but the culnan whom Harvard desired to hear on his specialty. The parting dinner in New York was the climax of the social attentions. To have been the guest of such a company would have been an honor to the most distinguished in letters, law or statesmanship.

By no means least was the financial triumph. Playing at an expense of more than $6,000 a week, Mr. Irvings receipts were $400,000; and he takes home the snug sum of $150,000, which ought to keep him well supplied for the remainder of his life with the "roast beef of Old England." This is certainly remarkable success, but the common verdict is that Mr. Irving has given value for every dollar. The verdict and the dollars will make Mr. Irying's second visit to America a pleasant memory

"Laugh and Grow Fat,"

"Laugh and Grow Fat," is a precept leasily preached, but not so easy to practice. If a person has no appetite, but a distressing nausea, sick headache, dyspepsia, boils, or any other ill resulting from inaction of the bowels, it is impossible to get up such a laugh as will produce aldermanic corpulence. In order to laugh satisfactorily you must be well, and to be well you must have your bowels in good order. You can do this and laugh heartily with Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgnitve Pellots," the little regulators of the liver and bowels and best promoters of joility.

this family have married into other families until their number is legion, the entire connection being farmers, except H. S. White, of Bellton, and his brother, Prof. I. C. White, of Morgantown.

They constitute a large part of the Methodist church in their community, and I believe with the exception of the one recorded here, who lives in Pennsylvania, all voted for Blaine and Logan.

There are but four of the brothers left, John, Simon L., and Thomas, of Monongalia, and Daniel of Cabell counties. They were all men of strong convictions of right and wrong, and the community bears the impress of their personal character, and distinctive religious convictions. A reunion of the entire connection during the coming summer is talked of.
